A 30 minute single-cam rotating workplaces comedy by Tina Thompson

LOGLINE: Overachiever Esperanza and her fellow temps compete for $15/hour assignments, but find that their toughest opponent is Luna, the sadistic woman who runs the temp agency.

Esperanza Ramos is over qualified for the entry-level jobs she applies for, but without a degree, she can't go higher. Desperate to move from her overcrowded hostel, she goes down to her local temp office.

She meets fellow temps Crystal, an actress/receptionist who does on the job character study; Soledad, an older secretary-type who thinks she has seniority and unmotivated Mikey, whose days are filled with video games and weed. They run into Luna, the sadistic Rent-A-Girl boss who enjoys hobbling her workers.

Besides regular office jobs, Rent-A-Girl gets interesting requests from clients who confuse it for an escort service. As long as no bodily fluids are exchanged and she makes money, Luna has no problem with it.

Adapting to the weirdness of new offices is hard...competing with your fellow workers for low-level assignments and often being confused for a sex worker, makes it even harder.
